

The Role of Diet in Early Child Development: Evidence From Nepal

References

1. Thorne-Lyman, A. L., Shrestha, M., Fawzi, W.W., Pasqualino, M., Strand, T.A., Kvestad, I., Hysing, M., Joshi, N., Lohani, M., & Miller, L. C. (2019). Dietary Diversity and Child Development in the Far West of Nepal: A Cohort Study. Nutrients, 11(8), 1799. <https://doi.org/10.3390/nu11081799>
2. Miller, L. C., Neupane, S., Joshi, N., Lohani, M., Rogers, B. L., Neupane, S., Ghosh, S., & Webb, P. (2020). Multisectoral community development in Nepal has greater effects on child growth and diet than nutrition education alone. Public health nutrition, 23(1), 146–161. <https://doi.org/10.1017/S136898001900260X>
3. Miller, L. C., Neupane, S., Joshi, N., Shrestha, M., Neupane, S., Lohani, M., & Thorne-Lyman, A. L. (2020). Diet quality over time is associated with better development in rural Nepali children. Maternal & child nutrition, 16(3), e12964. <https://doi.org/10.1111/mcn.12964>
4. Miller, L. C., Neupane, S., Joshi, N., & Lohani, M. (2020). MILK Symposium review: Milk consumption is associated with better height and weight in rural Nepali children over 60 months of age and better head circumference in children 24 to 60 months of age. Journal of dairy science, 103(11), 9700–9714. <https://doi.org/10.3168/jds.2020-18289>
5. Kvestad, I., Hysing, M., Shrestha, M., Ulak, M., Thorne-Lyman, A. L., Henjum, S., Ueland, P. M., Midttun, Ø., Fawzi, W., Chandyo, R. K., Shrestha, P. S., & Strand, T.A. (2017). Vitamin B-12 status in infancy is positively associated with development and cognitive functioning 5 y later in Nepalese children. The American journal of clinical nutrition, 105(5), 1122–1131. <https://doi.org/10.3945/ajcn.116.144931>
6. Henjum, S., Kvestad, I., Shrestha, M., Ulak, M., Chandyo, R. K., Thorne-Lyman, A. L., Shrestha, P. S., Kjellevoid, M., Hysing, M., & Strand, T.A. (2018). Erythrocyte DHA and AA in infancy is not associated with developmental status and cognitive functioning five years later in Nepalese children. Nutrition journal, 17(1), 70. <https://doi.org/10.1186/s12937-018-0375-5>